

Former TRANSCOM Senior Leader Joins XIO Board of Advisors
Appointment of Mr. Charlie Fletcher brings vast experience in DoD logistics and related operational improvements

January 20, 2010 – Vienna, Virginia – XIO Strategies, Inc., a supply chain management and communications consulting firm, announced that Ret. Army Major General Charlie Fletcher, the Director of Mobility and Logistics Command & Control within Advanced Global Services & Support in Boeing Integrated Defense Systems, has joined the company's Board of Advisors.

"We are very fortunate to have Charlie Fletcher on our Advisory Board," XIO President and CEO Mary Ann Wagner said. "His expertise both within the Army and with Boeing makes him a true subject matter expert in improving supply chain and logistics capabilities."

In his position at Boeing, Fletcher is responsible for establishing the company's capability to fuse logistics information from factory to user for both military and commercial customers worldwide. He is also one of eleven NATO Senior Mentors, working directly with the NATO staff and senior NATO leaders to improve logistics preparedness. Prior to his position at Boeing, Fletcher retired as an Army Major General. His last active duty assignment was Director of Operations and Plans at U.S. Transportation Command (TRANSCOM), where he was the senior operator of the Defense Department's $26B strategic distribution chain.

"I'm honored to join the XIO Team," said Fletcher of his new Advisory Board role. "XIO represents the best of small business innovation and superior technical expertise with a work environment in which employees thrive and customers derive maximum value. An established and respected leader in the areas of supply chain management and communications consulting, they are well positioned to continue their impressive growth. It is great to be a part of that bright future."
